Clare Clancy and Jake Edmiston said the Journal is looking to beef up its budget for Freedom of Information (FOI) requests.

They said this year they'd come in with a goal of fully utilizing the budget, and think it is due for an increase. Jake said Freedom of Information requests are an industry standard.

This year, the budget for Freedom of Information requests was $200. Jake motioned it be raised to $500; it was seconded by Daniel Szczepanek and the motion passed unanimously.

Clare said open editorial board is slated for March 6th, and that the Journal would run a few in–house advertisements beforehand. Jake said they're hoping to bring Principal Woolf out to the event.

Daniel Weinshenker said the business office was running as usual, and they were hoping to reduce the anticipated deficit by continuing strong ad sales and team–building among the sales reps.

Journal Board adjourned just before 2:45 p.m.
